

While many of my peers are apathetic or just uniformed by the already homogenous media, as an ivy league educated young adult I do not want to allow further media consolidation at the expense of individual expression of thought